

Moore College Network and Internet Access for John Chapman House Boarders

December 21, 2006

Preamble

The Moore College network (including internet access) is provided primarily to assist in teaching, learning, research, scholarship and administration within the college. It is also available to residents of John Chapman House (students and boarders).

Boarders who agree to the following conditions of use may use the network to access local and internet resources.

Conditions of Use

1. Internet access is freely available from the college network. Its primary purpose is to assist students in their learning and research. Accordingly, usage of the internet for non-academic purposes should be limited and large file downloads or media streaming avoided so as not to impact on other users of the network. Boarders wishing to undertake large downloads should make alternative arrangements such as getting an account with a wireless internet provider.
2. All computers connected to the college network must utilize an anti-virus program which has up-to-date definitions and all current security patches must be loaded to the operating system. Preferably anti-spyware software should also be installed.
3. Students must not allow any other person to access the college network using their login or password. Logins and passwords must be kept secure.
4. Students must not engage in any activity which is illegal, including the improper downloading, use or distribution of copyrighted material (computer programs, music, video, etc.)
5. Students should recognize that the internet contains much material that is unhelpful as a Christian (such as pornography), and should avoid visiting sites that are contrary to Christian standards. Please note that all internet activity on the college network is logged against the user account, and the John Chapman House warden may be informed of activity which is not appropriate.
6. If inappropriate material is inadvertently received (e.g. by spam email), then this should be deleted immediately.
7. Students may not use the college network for any commercial business activity without the written permission of the Manager of Information Systems

Breaches of these conditions of use may result in network privileges being withdrawn. Use of the College network by a boarder will be taken as his acknowledgement of and agreement to abide by these conditions of use.

William Hood
Manager of Information Systems
Moore College